memo
Dr. Rev. Arvin Luchs

Paul believed there were three abiding virtues in life: faith, hope and love. And love was the greatest. Several centuries later Augustine disagreed. He believed that hope was the best of the three virtues. Faith only tells us that God is, he said. Love only tells us that God is good. But hope tells us that God will work God's will.

It is not easy to be hopeful these days. Each day the headlines remind us that our world is plagued with war and inhumanity and threatened by ecological disaster. Each day violence and suffering wrack our community. The well-being of our children is fragile-as our city experiences one of the highest rates of teen homelessness in the country. No, it's not easy to be hopeful.

Yet, each day throughout our community people of vision and compassion sally forth to fight against the tide with compassion, vision and determination. What gives them hope?

This is the time of Lent-a time to reflect on our faith and to strengthen our discipleship. As in seasons past, we will gather each Wednesday evening to share a simple supper, to sing some of the familiar hymns, to reflect, and to learn.

This year there will be a new feature.

At each of the Lenten Suppers in March we will welcome a different leader from diverse occupations to speak to the statement: "This Gives Me Hope."

Charles Hinkle will lead off the series. Mr. Hinkle is an attorney--a partner at Stoel-Rives, and a nationally recognized expert on civil rights law. He is also an ordained minister in the United Church of Christ, Congregational.

Charles Lewis is a graduate of University of Portland and the Kennedy School of Government at Harvard University. He returned to Portland to found ETHOS-a service organization that helps to provide low cost musical instruments to at-risk school children.

Multnomah County Commissioner Serena Cruz is a dynamic and visionary community leader. She represents a new generation in public service.

Kathy Oliver has guided and built a widely heralded organization, Outside/In whose mission is to be a place of healing and new opportunity for troubled youth.

Rabbi Joshua Stamfer is one of the most beloved spiritual leaders in Portland. He has stood for peace, reconciliation and understanding during his years in active ministry as the leader of Congregation Neveh Shalom and continues, in retirement, to bring people of all traditions together in love and peace.

The soup buffet starts at 5:30 p.m.. We'll begin the program at 6:15 p.m. After an opportunity to dialogue with the speaker, we'll adjourn for a variety of classes organized by our education department.

Come and hear what gives hope to sustain these community leaders. You may find new insight and renewed reason for hope in your life.

See you in Church!

Ron Williams

Last year I attended a grant-writing seminar conducted by the Johnson Institute Foundation entitled Advancing Help and Hope. The conference was designed to provide faith-based and community based groups with hands on training and expertise in how to apply and win government grants that help people maintain alcohol and drug recovery, good mental health, and reduce recidivism among ex-offenders. I was shocked to discover that every other faith-based group at the conference were all providing services to people making the transition from prison back into the community. Many of the groups were very small churches in small towns where these activities consumed a great deal of their resources. Other churches dedicated space and property to house job training programs, church operated recovery programs, transitional housing, basic education classes and transportation assistance. Up to this point, I had been aware of “in jail” programs but had very little knowledge of the programs that help people once they get out. Additionally, it is well known that several years ago, penal systems in Oregon and around the country changed from rehabilitation to punishment. This change was reflected in the transitional services as well. Parole and probation became less about helping people make it on the outside and more about law enforcement and s a n c t i o n s . Lately, the chickens of Ballot Measure 11 are beginning to come home to roost. Ex-felons who have had no “in jail” counseling, therapy, anger management, job training, education or treatment for long term addiction are being released directly to the streets of our communities. Churches are being looked to as a resource for this growing crisis. On March 7, the Church, Society and Social Justice Committee will present a forum on the Prison to Community Re-Entry Crisis featuring Jo Ann Bowman, Director of Western Prisons Project and Tim Cayton, Oregon Department of Corrections, Director of Faith Based Transition Programs. Please join us.

Lunch at the Columbia Gorge Hotel

On March 10, we will lunch at the Columbia Gorge Hotel. The stately site of this wonderful hotel was originally developed in 1904 by a Hood River pioneer. Simon Benson built the hotel, hiring Italian stonemasons that had built his Columbia Gorge Scenic Highway. Famous for their meals, this is sure to be a special dining experience. "As you can imagine, a meal at the Columbia Gorge Hotel is much more than food; it is a treat for the senses." Following lunch we will have a short tour of the hotel, and then visit the Carousel Museum. The collection at this specialty museum includes more than 150 carved animals, operational Wurlitzer band organ, carousel steam engine and other exhibits from the golden age of carousels. Cost: $38, including motorcoach, luncheon with dessert, admission, gratuities and 2 smiling escorts (based on minimum of 25 passengers). Reservation due by March 1, with $15 deposit. Time: Depart from church at 10:00am, return about 4:30pm.

A Night at the Beach & Theater Party

Outstanding rates have been secured at The Elizabeth Street Inn on the beach in Newport for April 16 & 17—a lovely, comfortable place to stay. Each room faces the ocean, with a balcony and fireplace. The Porthole Players will be doing Damn Yankees at the Performing Arts Center, and excellent seats are reserved. Transportation details are being confirmed. Watch for details soon! Time: Friday morning until Saturday afternoon. Cost: TBD.

Looking way ahead, plans are being finalized for June 2005! Our "Big Trip" in 2005 will be a River Cruise from Amsterdam to Budapest on Vantage Tours custom-built river cruise ship. Call Cheryl to have your name added to the "interested" list to receive information.

The Golden Age of the Movie Palace

Interested in architecture and history? FUMC member Dennis Hedberg will present a slide show and mini-lecture about West Coast movie palaces of the last century at Sherman Clay/Moe's Pianos on Sunday, March 14, at 2:00pm. The event is sponsored by the Columbia River Organ Club.

His collection of color slides is more extensive than most historical collections. Personally taken by Dennis during the 1960s, these slides feature architectural details of such unique theatres as Portland's long gone Oriental Theatre, Portland Paramount (Schnitzer Concert Hall) and the San Francisco Fox Theatre, which was regarded as the world's most opulent movie palace. The event is complimentary and open to the public, and theatre organ music will be performed by Jonas Nordwall.

There are still openings at some of the Friends of Music Dinners and you are invited to make reservations for them. There will be one or two of the dinners each month until the end of August that will be hosted by members of the church in their homes.

The Music Committee has added another Friends of Music dinner that will be of particular interest to those of you that would like to attend with your entire family or would like to get a group together. It will be on June 13 in Collins Hall after church and will feature dinner and musical entertainment for $25 per family or $10 for a single reservation.

Stop by the kiosk in Collins Hall to reserve your places for any of the dinners mentioned above. We'd love to have you join us at one or more of them!

New Winds at FUMC

Two weeks ago the Mary Collins Pipe Organ was retrofitted with a new blower. The cubic feet per minute output of the new blower is more than tripled, with the wind pressure almost doubled. The blower motor is still 5 horsepower, just like its predecessor. However, as this motor is a reconditioned motor built in the 1920s, it has the capability of almost 7 horsepower as measured by present standards. The results are a more stable and greatly increased wind supply without increasing the cost of electricity. Will the organ become louder? Not really, but wait until Easter to pass final judgment.

Another change in the wind for FUMC is the modification of the Director of Music position. About six months ago I requested more free time to pursue my out of town concert career, which has been very limited since reassuming all of the meeting and administration responsibilities of this position a few years ago.

Working together with Arvin, the Chairpersons of the Music Committee and the SPRC, the Director of Music position was divided into two categories; Artistic Director of Music and Executive Director of Music. All of us are very pleased that Kelly Qualls consented to become the new Administrative Director of Music, even after reading the job description. By limiting my responsibilities to the Artistic Director of Music and Organist, I now will have the time to live out of a suitcase.

We have been discussing the oldest bell in Portland, which is displayed in our Narthex. After it fell from the tower and was broken, it was not immediately repaired. For on thing, no one was sure that it could be satisfactorily repaired. It is only in fairly recent times that metallurgical technology has mastered the technique of welding cast metals, and the bell, of course, was a casting. And welding cast bronze is not a job for your ordinary corner trailer-hitch welding shop. But, after a time, Ed Pittaway, a Trustee, located a firm willing and able to take on the project. When completed, the bell was not re-hung in the Tower because even the experts who had repaired it were not sure that it would withstand ringing. And besides, money was scarce and it got removed from the budget a time or two. So it was put on display once again in Beckham Court. Remembering its earlier disappearance from that location, however, it was decided that it should be fastened down more permanently, so the Archives and History Committee planned a sort of miniature oil-derrick tower for it. Then someone had the idea of putting it inside the building. And that went through the hoops of approval by the Board of Trustees and the then equivalent of the Leadership Council, and the Committee on Fine Arts was consulted. Out of the bureaucratic red tape, including deciding exactly where was the best place, and the perennial shortage of funds, the Narthex was chosen and a donor willing to make it a memorial was found. Gale Morris, a member and an industrial designer by profession, was enlisted. He promptly abandoned the "oil derrick" suggestion, and not only designed but personally fabricated what we have today. He even invented a couple of inconspicuous "locks" for it so persons, especially children, wouldn't be able to ring it thoughtlessly. And he overcame the obstacle in fastening it down of the radiant heating hot water pipes buried in the concrete slab. Accidentally piercing one of them would have caused a real problem! It still had never been rung since its repair, and it was with a lot of trepidation that it was finally used on a special occasion. All that bureaucratic delay had served a purpose, apparently, because the internal stresses caused by the welding had dissipated, and it rang clear and true! God moves in mysterious ways His (or Hers, as the case may be) wonders to perform!

Couple's Enrichment Retreat

Narayan Lincoln, a Samaritan Counselor, will be leading a Couple's Enrichment Retreat for First Church couples at Alton Collins Retreat Center March 26-28. The cost will be $350/couple, with scholarship help available. The cost includes housing, six meals, and the services of a trained marriage counselor. The retreat is limited to ten couples, so please RSVP to Rev. Brenda Sene.

Quilt Exhibit in Collins Hall

Quiltworms is a small quilt group in which we read books and make a quilt in response. Jane Kirkpatrick's book, All Together in One Place, about a group of hardy, feisty pioneer women who came west on the Oregon Trail, inspired the collection of quilts that will hang in Collins Hall February 22 through April 11.

Turn Your Trash to Treasure!

Please save the labels from the following food products: Campbell's, Swanson's, Pepperidge Farm, Santiam, Flav-R-Pac. Turn them into the church office, attention Dorothy. Hazel Wells manages the project of collecting aluminum can tabs (actually any aluminum!) for the Oregon Kidney Foundation. This makes such a difference in the lives of many folks. You may bring these into the church office as well.

New Approach to VBS

Do you have a special talent? Is it cooking, drama, writing, storytelling, crafts? This year's Vacation Bible School wants you and your special talent! Our VBS will be focusing on the stories of Daniel and Esther --exploring each story through cooking, writing, drama/costumes and more. Everyone's special talents are needed and your commitment can be for 2 days or 5 days!

This exciting approach to VBS will be happening June 21 to June 25 ending in a Purim party for all VBS kids. Come celebrate with us and share your talents with 100+ kids! Contact Agnes Zach at 503/228-3195, X229 or azach@fumcpdx.org.
