YOUTH SUNDAY

MAY 23, 2010

Come join us in worship on Sunday, May 23, 2010, as your future church presents worship in a traditional style. The youth group is excited to present another youth-led Sunday service. They will be attending to all aspects: greeting, reading, music, and preaching.

We will have two "mini-sermons" provided by two seniors from the class of 2010: Cassara Aaby and Emily Wright.

The youth hand bell choir, juBELLation, will be providing music along with the Cherub Choir, Sound Seekers and Veritas. Come and worship with the youth!

Congratulations to the graduating high school
seniors of First Church:

Cassara Aaby
Grayson Alexander
Taryn Evans
Matthew Fricke
Nicholas Nathanielsz
Danzel Ramos

memo

Rev. Dr. Arvin R. Luchs

We've become somewhat jaded by bad news from Wall Street. Like that old country song, "I've been down so long, it looks like up to me!"<sup>1</sup> Like you, I've listened to the explanations and assurances of professors, pundits—even Nobel Laureates. Honestly, most of the economist's complicated explanations leave this ol' preacher scratching his head in confusion.

Last Thursday's mini-crises seemed to shock even the most blasé among us. The venerable Dow Jones Industrial average plummeted (at one point) by more than a thousand points—the largest single day slide in financial history. Thankfully, it rebounded a bit—and by the end of trading was off a serious, but less dramatic, 347.8 points. Even then it was enough that one network newscaster noted everyone's savings would be affected by the events of that day.<sup>2</sup>

As the dust settled, there seemed to be two explanations for the devastating turn. The first was reaction among traders to the debt crisis and economic chaos in Greece. The second: apparently a trader typed in some incorrect values, triggering a chain of events that compounded to imperil the entire market.

A couple of months ago The Right Reverend Rowan Williams, the Archbishop of Canterbury wrote a brief reflection on economics and faith that was published as an op-ed in Newsweek.<sup>3</sup> "It is quite striking," he wrote, "that, in the Gospel parables, Jesus uses economics as a framework for his stories ... Like our coexistence with the earth, like familial bonds, like the tensions of public political life, economic relationships help us see our humanity in the context of God's actions. Money is a metaphor; our monetary dealings shed light on aspects of our human condition that, rightly understood, tell us something about how we might relate to God."

I wonder if Jesus might not have found at least two lessons in that calamitous Thursday:

Lesson one: we are inextricably interdependent. Though we declare our autonomy and our independence—our fate is bound up in the fate of our brothers and sisters everywhere. As John Donne said so memorably, "All (human)kind is of one author, and is one volume ... No (one) is an island, entire of itself ..."<sup>4</sup> We remember Jesus said to love our neighbor as ourselves and emphasized that with a parable about an outcast Samaritan who offers whatever it costs to rescue a mugging victim who cannot pay for his own care.<sup>5</sup> The economic health of Greece affects not only the European Economic Union—but markets everywhere. It should cause us to reflect on the plight of lesser developed countries struggling under the load of overwhelming international debt and look again at the Jubilee movement!

Lesson two: we are fallible. I do not know if this 'error' was accidental—or a scheme motivated by greed (an SEC investigation is underway.) At the present it is characterized as a 'fat finger' mistake. I'm glad to hear there are efforts to prevent such mistakes in the future. Nevertheless, we realize that no matter how good our intentions, no matter how careful we try to be, no matter how sophisticated our technology—we are not a perfect people and we do not live in a perfect world. Remember the embarrassment on NASA's collective face in 1999 when a 120-million-dollar space probe designed to unlock the secrets of Martian climate crashed into the red planet because one of the scientists did not convert English numbers to metric?

Fortunately few of us are in a position to destabilize the economy or thwart a space mission—but all of us make mistakes—and while we need to be accountable, to learn from them, we need to know the grace of forgiveness and redemption. Wasn't it Alexander Pope who noted, "...to err is human, to forgive is Divine"?<sup>6</sup>

Good lessons from difficult economic times!

See you in Church!

HOW TO THINK LIKE LEONARDO DA VINCI

Sundays, May 2-30, 2010
9:15 to 10:15 AM in the Fireside Room

This series is utilizing Micheal J. Gelb's book, How to Think Like Leonardo da Vinci: Seven Steps to Genius Every Day. Gelb is a noted Da Vinci scholar and has analyzed the thinking styles and modalities of Leonardo's multifaceted life which demonstrate "genius in abundance." Gelb's conclusion is that, "...the essential elements of Leonardo's d Vinci's approach to learning and the cultivation of intelligence are quite clear and can be studied, emulated and applied." Gelb breaks Da Vinci's thinking into seven distinct principles/themes: Curiosita, Dimostrazione, Sensazione, Sfumato, Arte/Scienza, Corporalita, and Conessione.

Doug Force is teaching this class, which offers a brief introduction to these concepts, utilizing exercises that illustrate each type of thinking, and discussing the application of these modalities in our everyday lives. Books may be purchased in the church office.

DIETRICH BONHOEFFER: THE COST OF DISCIPLESHIP

Sundays, June 6-27, 2010 - 9:15 AM in the Fireside Room

"We have been silent witnesses of evil deeds ... Will our inward power of resistance be strong enough for us to find our way back?"
— Dietrich Bonhoeffer

In this class, we will explore the life of Dietrich Bonhoeffer (1906-45), who not only was a remarkable German theologian, but was also a central figure in the German Resistance to the Nazis during the time of Adolf Hitler. He was also a founding member of the Confessing Church. He ultimately paid the price for his stand by being executed in 1945 in a German concentration camp. In this class we will see the DVD Bonhoeffer and study his writing about "the cost of discipleship." Gene Gregory will be our teacher.

the edge

thoughts for the journey

REV. LOWELL GREATHOUSE

Anyone who knows me, knows that I like to mark up my books when I read them. Well, I just got a book that's already marked up with orange marker. Is it used? Did I get it from Powell's? No, actually this is the way it came. You see, it is called, The Poverty and Justice Bible, and it has almost 3,000 verses marked in orange whenever the theme of poverty or justice is addressed.

There is a lot of debate these days about poverty and justice and the role of faith in discussing such matters. The Poverty and Justice Bible makes it abundantly clear that these themes are at the very heart of the biblical story and are associated with what is on God's heart. On the cover of this edition, Tony Campolo says, "Here's proof that faith without a commitment to justice for the poor is a sham, because it ignores the most explicit of all the social concerns of Scripture."

In the book, the editors from the Bible Society, who published this edition say: "The evidence is there on almost every page of the book you're holding. A concern for the poor and an emphasis on just and faithful behavior flows through the Bible like a river. It underpins the laws of the Old Testament and resounds through the words of the prophets; it forms a core part of all that Jesus said and did and shapes the activities of those who followed him. Everywhere you go in this book, God's love for the poor and desire for justice leap out at you. So we're not creating something new here, we're just helping people to see more clearly what is already there." (The Poverty and Justice Bible, p. 4)

As you read your Bible, see if you notice the constant presence of the themes of poverty and justice.
